Ideal for meeting the demands of bustling school corridors, day in and day out, Designflooring also meets with the specification needs of schools today. As the Government continues to provide local authorities with more funds for schools to invest into the maintenance and improvement of their grounds, attention is being paid to interior solutions that not only meet procurement budgets but high standards of quality, longevity and overall finish.

A case in point is Bengeworth First School. A larger than average primary school, they decided to carry out renovations to improve the overall environment. When it came to choosing the specific type of new floor coverings, they had three key requirements to fulfil: natural finish, hard-wearing and swift to install.

Enter Designflooring. Their hygienic, durable, quiet-underfoot and easy to maintain commercial design flooring not only offered a wide range of realistic wood and natural stone finishes, it was guaranteed to withstand the wear and tear that schools are subjected to on a daily basis.

The Van Gogh range was chosen as a cost-effective and time-efficient option, as the large plank sizes ensured that the installation would be complete in time. Limestone tiles from the Monet range were also fitted into some of the other classrooms because of its attractive yet robust finish.

Ticking all the right boxes, the school's new flooring from Karndean has certainly received a gold star of approval from pupils, teachers and cleaners alike.
